St. Philip's Bazaar Was Huge Success

The bazaar and dance given by St. Philip's Guild at the Rink last Friday evening was a huge success, both socially and financially.

The bazaar was held in the afternoon with a large number of people, both men and women, in attendance. The various booths were liberally patronized.

The dance was also largely attended. Refreshments were served.

The proceeds will be used to build a guild room addition to the gymnasium.

The ladies of St. Philip's Guild have requested the Sentinel to state that they feel very grateful to the friends who sent in articles for the sale, contributed to the lunch or helped with the work; to the men's committee which had charge of the dance; to the musicians, Miss Margaret Bronson, Miss Ruth Lindman, Mr. Anderson of Juneau and Mr. Upshaw for their services; to Mr. Dalgity who acted as auctioneer and to the young men of the community who erected booths, decorated the hall and gave their assistance in so many ways. All this kindly helpfulness together with the generous patronage of the public enabled the ladies to clear a very large sum for the building of the guild room.

The Cordova city council recently created the office of city attorney, which office is to carry with it the salary of $50 per month.

The skeleton of a mammoth bear recently killed near Cordova by Dr. W. H. Chase has been shipped to the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History.

A tax of six dollars per dog has been assessed at Cordova, and all dogs found in town after the 20th of this month are to be shot.

The ex-Service men of Wrangell will give their first dance on Thanksgiving night at the Redmen's hall for the benefit of the proposed chapter of the American Legion.

When the Americans organized in Wrangell last week a dispatch telling of the organization meeting was sent to the press of Alaska. It is gratifying to note the prominence given this dispatch by the various newspapers of Alaska. The Ketchikan Times published the dispatch under a big, bold type double column head at the top of its front page. The editor of the Times was the organizer of the Wrangell branch of the Alaska Labor Union.

Simply the Only Thing to Do.

"Do you think it is proper to use profanity to a mule?" "So far as my own feelings are concerned," declared the expert teamster, "it is highly improper. But when you are trying to get along with as sensitive and exacting an animal as a mule you've simply got to humor him."

Native Hospital Now Open

A bulletin recently sent out to teachers and nurses in Southeastern Alaska by Superintendent Hawkesworth of the U. S. The Haines sanitarium for the time being is to be closed.

Little sailing vessels plying from Nome across the Bering sea to Siberia this year will open an export business that will probably run in value close to six figures according to estimates made in Nome. Most of the merchandise moved from Nome was taken up on the first steamers in the summer from Seattle. The goods are sold to Siberian Natives and white trappers and miners operating along the coast across from Nome.

SCHOOL NOTES

Judge Thomas donated desk pads and blotters to the school which were appreciated by the teachers and pupils.

Last Wednesday, November 19 the Audubon society gave a program as follows:

Song—Robin's Return—Intermediate.

The Nesting of the Birds—Vernon Myers.

The Crow—Dorothy Johnson.

Song—The Woodpecker—Primary Room.

The Greatest Traveler—Homer Worden.

Elton Engstrom, secretary of the society took charge of the program.

On Wednesday, November 26, Hon. P. C. McCormack gave a very interesting talk on his experiences as a member of the legislature of the Territory.

Mr. McCormack was instrumental in getting many of our most favorable measures pertaining to the schools through the legislature He was especially interested in our present law providing for the maintenance of our territorial schools; also the measure establishing the agricultural college.

Mr. McCormack's speech was much appreciated by all and we hope that we may again have the opportunity of hearing him.

What They Sigh For.

There are many busy women in the world who sigh to themselves and say, "I know I could do great things if I only had leisure." The truth is that real talent generally finds a way to express itself whether its possessor has leisure or whether she is worried and harassed by the many small duties that of necessity fill many a woman's life. It should be a consolation to most of us, therefore, to know that if we really have a talent worth giving to the world at large, it will find time for development.—Exchange.

Al Osborn Dies Tuesday After Short Illness

Had Been a Resident of Wrangell for Thirty Years

Wrangell was shocked Tuesday morning when it became known that Al Osborn had passed away.

Mr. Osborn returned Saturday from Tacoma where he had been to place his son, John, in the Cushman school. He complained of not feeling well and on Tuesday was removed to the home of Councilman E. A. Lindman, and a doctor summoned. Although he did not appear to be suffering it was evident that he was sinking and at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning he breathed his last.

Al Osborn was born in the state of Indiana 56 years ago. Before he was grown he went to Arkansas. When a young man he came to the Northwest and worked for two or three years in Seattle. In 1889, when he was 26 years of age he came to Wrangell.

During his long residence in Wrangell Mr. Osborn has followed various occupations. Soon after settling here he worked for George H. Barnes on the latter's ranch on Farm Island. Later he was associated with Mr. Barnes in the logging business. Still later Mr. Osborn had the ranch on Surgeif island which is now owned by W. E. Parrott. He was jailor when W. D. Grant was U. S. deputy marshal. For a time he was owner of the Wrandairy, which he sold to G. E. Diemart three years ago. Since that time Mr. Osborn has been employed most of the time as a watchman by the Alaska Sanitary Packing company.

Mr. Osborn was always known as a man who was straightforward and honorable in his business dealings.

In 1904 Mr. Osborn was married in Wrangell to Miss Lucy Klaquitz. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. P. Corser. Mrs. Osborn passed away September 10, 1917. Four Osborn children survive their parents. They are John, aged 14; Gertrude, aged 11; Albert, aged 6. In July, 1916, Mr. and Mrs. Osborn lost a son, Leander, aged 10.

The next day after the death of his wife Mr. Osborn, during a conversation with the publisher of the Sentinel, said: "My children are all I have left to live for. I am anxious that they grow up all together, and instead of growing apart, become nearer and dearer to each other as they grow older."

Mr. Osborn was a member of the following fraternal organizations: Stikine Tribe No. 5, Improved Order of Redmen; Camp Wrangell No. 28, Arctic Brotherhood; Wrangell Lodge No. 866, Loyal Order of Moose.

The funeral was held from the Redmen's hall this afternoon and was under the auspices of the Redmen's lodge.

The pall bearers were George H. Barnes, F. E. Gingrass, George Card, J. G. Grant, Pat Loftus, Charles H. Borch.

Another Type.

Another type of American that gives us an awful pain is the constructive critic whose attitude seems to be that he isn't going to be proud of his country until he has to.—Ohio State Journal.

Salmon River Section Active

The great mineral area up the Salmon River valley will be humming with development work this winter. Practically all of the operating companies will continue working. Next season promises to be a banner one. The great Premier mine, situated about 13 miles up from the mouth of Salmon River at Hyder, will devote the winter to mining, and it is reported that the program is an extensive one, not only contemplating the early shipment of the $200,000 worth of ore already on the dump, but the extraction of more ore to be hauled to the beach with snow motors, of which it is understood a number have been ordered. The first of these new tractors is due here on any boat now.

A compressor plant and other machinery is to be installed at the mine and it is understood that this is to go in over the snow early in the season.

Other operating mines this winter will be the Big Missouri, Forty-Nine, Mineral Hill and Bush, and probably the New Alaska.—Portland Canal News.

BANDITS BUSY IN PORTLAND AND SEATTLE

PORTLAND—Newton Burgess state highway commissioner, and George Perringer, a rancher of Pendleton, were shot and killed by highwaymen while at dinner in the Claremont tavern in the outskirts of this city last midnight. The highwaymen then looted the inn.

SEATTLE—Bandits held up the Lake Washington ferry boat at Lincoln early Monday morning. They bound the engineer and were preparing to blow the safe open when a policeman appeared and emptied his revolver. One of the bandits was killed and the other captured. The prisoner will recover.

Regarding Thanksgiving Day

It must be admitted that our country has been an egotistical nation, because of our great material expansion and prosperity, and that the true spirit of Thanksgiving Day has not been felt by a very large proportion of the people during the past few years. The intent of the pioneers who established it has been lost sight of largely. It has been regarded too much simply as a day to be observed by the Church people, while the crowd took advantage of the holiday to indulge in worldly pleasures.—Ex.

St. Andrew's Day and Advent Day Services

9 a. m.—Holy Communion.

10:30 a. m.—Interpreted sermon.

11:30 a. m. — Bible school. Theme: St. Andrew, a guide for the Christian year.

7:30 p. m.—Theme: There are some powers the law says, that can not be delegated to others. For example, a trustee can not delegate his power to others. Can a man delegate his personal duties to society and to God to others? Can substitutes be hired? St. Andrew points the way, telling how.

The offering will be for the Christmas expenses of the Sunday School Christmas tree.

A Seward merchant who has been handling cider for years has installed his own cider mill and grinds up the apples for the cider himself. Since doing this and tasting the product he wonders what the other so-called cider is made of.

Save Pennies—Waste Dollars

¶ Some users of printing save pennies by getting inferior work and lose dollars through lack of advertising value in the work they get. Printers as a rule charge very reasonable prices, for none of them get rich although nearly all of them work hard.

Moral: Give your printing to a good printer and save money.

God Gave You Health. Thank Him For It. Go to Church.

SOME people never think of God until a loved one is ill or a great trouble besets them. Then they seek the SOLACE OF RELIGION. A clergyman is called in, and prayers are said at the bedside for the loved one's recovery. God is MERCIFUL, and ofttimes these prayers are answered, and the loved one recovers.

IT IS NOT FAIR TO GOD, HOWEVER, TO ASK HIM TO REMEMBER YOU WHEN YOU HAVE FORGOTTEN HIM. WHEN EVERYTHING IS GOING ALONG SMOOTHLY AND THE WORLD LOOKS BRIGHT SOME MEN FORGET THERE IS A GOD. THEY NEVER GO TO CHURCH. WHILE THEY WILL RESENT THE CHARGE THAT THEY WOULD OPENLY OFFEND GOD, THEY OFFEND HIM DEEPLY BY NOT GOING TO CHURCH. THE SUCCESSFUL MAN SHOULD GO TO CHURCH TO THANK GOD FOR HIS WORLDLY GIFTS. THE SUPREME BEING GAVE HIM ALL HE HAS—LIFE, HEALTH, HAPPINESS—AND HE SHOULD THANK HIM FOR THEM.

Thanks to the GO TO CHURCH movement, there has been a religious awakening over the land. RELIGION NEVER WAS DEAD. All that it required was a stimulus, and that stimulus was provided by the GO TO CHURCH campaign. It should not be necessary to urge men to GO TO CHURCH. There isn't an argument that can be advanced by any man who believes in God in favor of staying away from church. Take away the churches and you will have a condition bordering on anarchy.

The man who GOES TO CHURCH is prepared to MEET ANY CRISIS, moral, physical or financial. His faith in a Supreme Being sustains him in the most severe trials.

Destruction Threatens Newspapers

Over 75 per cent of the Newspapers Will Be Forced Out of Business Within Next 90 Days

Unless Something Is Done In the Immediate Future to Relieve an Intolerable Situation

Brought About Through the Most High Handed Profiteering by Manufacturers of Print Paper

NEW YORK — Thirteen cents a pound, f. o. b. mill, was asked for print paper here during this week. The price was for car load lots, and was made to one of the largest purchasers of sheet print paper in the country. The mill refused to make a price of anything less than 13 cents.

In 1915 the daily papers of New York, Chicago, and other cities were buying print paper at two cents or less, delivered at their press rooms. This same grade of paper is now quoted at 13 cents in car load lots f. o. b. mill.

CHICAGO—The large daily papers of Chicago are being forced to omit a large amount of advertising from every issue because of the shortage of print paper. Owing to advertising being the chief source of revenue for metropolitan papers this print paper shortage will mean their ruin if it continues.

WASHINGTON — Complaints of inability to secure print paper are pouring into the Government offices here from all parts of the United States. Newspapers are reporting prices as high as 12½ and 13 cents per pound being asked for print paper, and when orders are placed at these prices it is possible to secure only very small quantities not nearly enough to meet their needs. The prices quoted above are for car load lots f.o.b. mill. The small publisher who is unable to buy his paper in carload lots will have to pay considerably more than 13 cents a pound for his paper.

WASHINGTON— Representative Reaves of Nebraska told the House that the newspapers of the United States are threatened with destruction because of inability to obtain print paper.

NEW YORK—The price of print paper is soaring skyward, with the limit nowhere in sight, and every newspaper publisher forced by circumstances to bid for every pound of print paper that can be secured.

Without any evidence of reason pulp prices went up from $26 to $40 a ton, and print paper went up proportionately, and then some. New record prices are being made every day and almost every hour, and the manufacturers and brokers are reaping tremendous profits. The paper jobbers are helpless in the face of conditions. In fact the situation has become so serious that jobbers are afraid to accept orders and a number of them are withdrawing from the print paper market entirely.

It is openly charged here that the manufacturers and brokers are operating together; that the mills are selling almost exclusively through the brokers, and that the brokers are merely the representatives of mill owners. In this way the tremendous profits that are being made are not reflected on the books of the mills, even though they find their way into the pockets of the mill owners.

These paper brokers must not in any way be confused with paper jobbers. The brokers do not carry a stock of paper; they have no investment in merchandise; in fact, the great majority of the paper they sell is not manufactured when the sale is made. Publishers have claimed that mills with which they have in the past dealt direct now turn down their orders, and that the only way they can secure paper is by dealing through these brokers, though in the end the paper is manufactured and shipped by the same mills that have declined to accept their orders direct.

It is said that in some cases orders for paper will pass through as many as seven different brokers before the orders reach the mills, each broker making a margin of profit. It is simply an extreme case of pyramiding profits, with seemingly no remedy for the trouble. The paper manufacturers are killing the goose that has been laying their golden eggs.

Unless the publishers can find some means of relief over 75 per cent of the newspapers in the United States will have to suspend publication within the next 90 days. If the price of flour or bacon should increase 100 per cent in one day there would still be a demand for these commodities. But if the publisher should undertake to raise his advertising rates in proportion to this sudden, unheard of raise in the price of print paper the advertiser would very likely cut down on the amount of space used, and in some cases, no doubt, even undertake to get along without any publicity whatever.

It is easy to see what this unwarranted paper shortage means to the press of the nation. The newspapers cannot run without paper. They cannot buy paper at present prices and break even. The publishers of the nation are up against one of two things—suspension or bankruptcy—and they must choose one or the other very shortly unless something is done in the immediate future to relieve the situation.

The paper baron is in the saddle, he has no mercy, and the newspapers of America are his victims.

The publishers' associations throughout the United States will appeal to the Department of Justice which is the one and only source from which they can hope for relief.

Reading for the Blind.

Galt, the Scotchman, vastly improved the system of books for the blind using a modified Roman letter, and confining himself to lower case in preference to capitals, the Detroit News recalls. In 1834 Galt issued the gospel of St. John, the first book of the Bible ever printed for the blind. The work was taken up in America by Doctor Howe, the husband of Julia Ward Howe, then in charge of the Perkins institute in Boston, who printed the entire New Testament in 1838. Doctor Howe issued the entire Bible in raised characters in 1843, and a similar work was issued in Glasgow a few years later. The first magazine for the blind was established in England in 1855 by the Rev. W. Taylor, who devoted 40 years of his life to the education of the sightless. A circulating library for the blind was founded in 1882 at the Perkins institute in Boston, and libraries of this kind have since been established in nearly all large cities.

Strive for Higher Life.

Old Father Time's hour glass has made me realize that happiness and success in life are gained from a determination toward the higher life; there must be conscious effort to repel the solicitations of the lower. The education of the mill is a slow and toilsome process, but we should strive to fit ourselves for some higher sphere of being and adjust ourselves worthily to this life; show character and courage in all our actions toward others, also love and kindness. Men are weak through indolence and want of self-confidence in themselves. All great events hang on a hair. The able man profits by everything and neglects nothing that may give him one chance the more of success. The less competent man, despising some single precaution, often loses everything.—Exchange.

Story of Familiar Quotation.

Correctly given the quotation is: "When Greeks joined Greeks, then was the tug of war." It is from a tragedy entitled "The Rival Queens; or Alexander the Great," by Nathaniel Lee, a tragic poet who died in 1692. He wrote a number of tragedies in spite of the fact that he had occasional attacks of insanity, a misfortune that seemed to assist rather than retard his bursts of eloquence. Curiously enough, while that one line has lived and has been wafted down through the centuries and quoted by thousands, there is not one person in a hundred who knows who wrote it or anything about its author, even after they have heard his name. Advice to authors, try to utter at least one pungent sentence if you wish your words to be remembered.

Simple Perfume Making.

At first thought it might seem an impossible feat to collect the perfume of flowers after it has escaped into the air, yet it seems simple enough by a method that the Scientific American describes. Fresh, high-scented blossoms are placed in an uncovered bowl filled with water and set near the "collector," which consists of a common glass funnel with the small end closed. The funnel is filled with a mixture of crushed ice and salt and suspended in an upright position. Moisture from the air of the room forms on it and unites with the emanations from the flowers. As the moisture collects it runs off the tip of the funnel into a receptacle. If this liquid is mixed with an equal amount of pure alcohol, the perfume of the flowers is preserved indefinitely.

Cologne Has Improved.

The poet, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, was a dreamer, an opium eater and a man of curious moods and tenses. One time he visited Germany and afterward wrote his impression of the city of Cologne. He corroborated the ancient tradition that Cologne was once so filthy and evil-smelling a place that certain inhabitants thereof exploited its imperfections by inventing a perfume of the cheap and lingering sort, by means of which the lives of the inhabitants were made more tolerable since it furnished them with a palliate, not a cure, for their unsanitary condition. The Cologne of today is fair and sweet enough to satisfy the most sensitive of noses.

A Strawberry Dream.

Strawberry time recalls to those who have visited Denmark in summer that delightful cellar in Copenhagen where a feast of strawberries and cream was spread, and whoso chose could partake thereof at a quite small charge—the equivalent of 6d, if we remember rightly. Piles of strawberries, quart jugs of cream partly whipped, great basins of sugar, and nothing else, all down the long table in the cool basement, to which the visitor descends from the hot street. It is in truth a strawberry dream. Every Dane knows Anderson's cellar. It is one of the attractions of Copenhagen, and to have eaten strawberries there once is to have an enduring memory of something nearly perfect on this imperfect earth.—London Chronicle.

Beginning of Man.

From this sketch of the first history of man it appears that his departure from the paradise which reason represents as the first residence of his species, was nothing else than the transition from the rudeness of a merely animal nature, to humanity, from the leading strings of instinct to the guidance of reason—in a word, from the guardianship of nature, to a state of freedom. Whether man has gained or lost by this change, can no longer be a question, if we regard the destination of the species, which consists solely in progress toward perfection; however defective may have been the first attempts, and even a long series of successive attempts to penetrate to this end.—Kant.

Did It Up in Curl Papers.

The young woman was wearing a peculiar do-funny feather on her hat. It was something like a peacock's plume and it was something like an aigret. "I like that contrivance on your hat," said her friend, "but how does it keep itself so nicely curled? If I tried to wear a feather like that, it would be uncurled and straggly all the time." "I'll tell you a secret," replied the young woman. "I do it in curl papers every night. Honest and true I take each little flexible spiral and do it up as carefully in curl papers as if it were my own hair. The next day I remove the papers and it is the fluffiest, prettiest thing imaginable. Work? O, yes, but you have to take pains if you want to keep presentable all the time, you know."—Springfield Union.

Old Houses of Cheer.

Paris has at least one restaurant—the Cafe de Regence—that is more than 200 years old; the Mitre hotel at Oxford, England, is said to be 500 years old; the Rathskeller at Bremen, which holds what is regarded as the finest stock of Rhine and Moselle wine in the world, was built in 1405; the curious little restaurant known as the Bratwurstglocklein, in Nuremberg, which is part of a church, has, it is believed, been serving roast sausages since the year 1400; and the Capello Nero restaurant in Venice traces its beginning back to the year 1376.

Lafayette Worthily Honored.

In 1777, on July 31, the Marquis de Lafayette received by a vote of congress the appointment of major general in the American army. Lafayette was the most eminent of the young Frenchmen who volunteered their services to the cause of American liberty. With a vessel fitted out at his own expense he arrived in America in the spring of 1777 and enlisted as a volunteer in Washington's army, declining all pay for his services. It was only a few months later that he was appointed major general in recognition of his military ability. He was then but twenty years of age.

Little Things.

The world is made up of atoms, and life is made up of little things. We must be faithful in small duties if we ever are faithful at all, and walk the heavenly way step by step, if we are ever to reach our longed-for destination. We talk of little things and great things as if we could discriminate between them, but until we can foresee sequences we must talk ignorantly. We cannot tell what any act will bring in its train; we are only asked to choose between right and wrong, and leave results where they belong.
